MARMOR

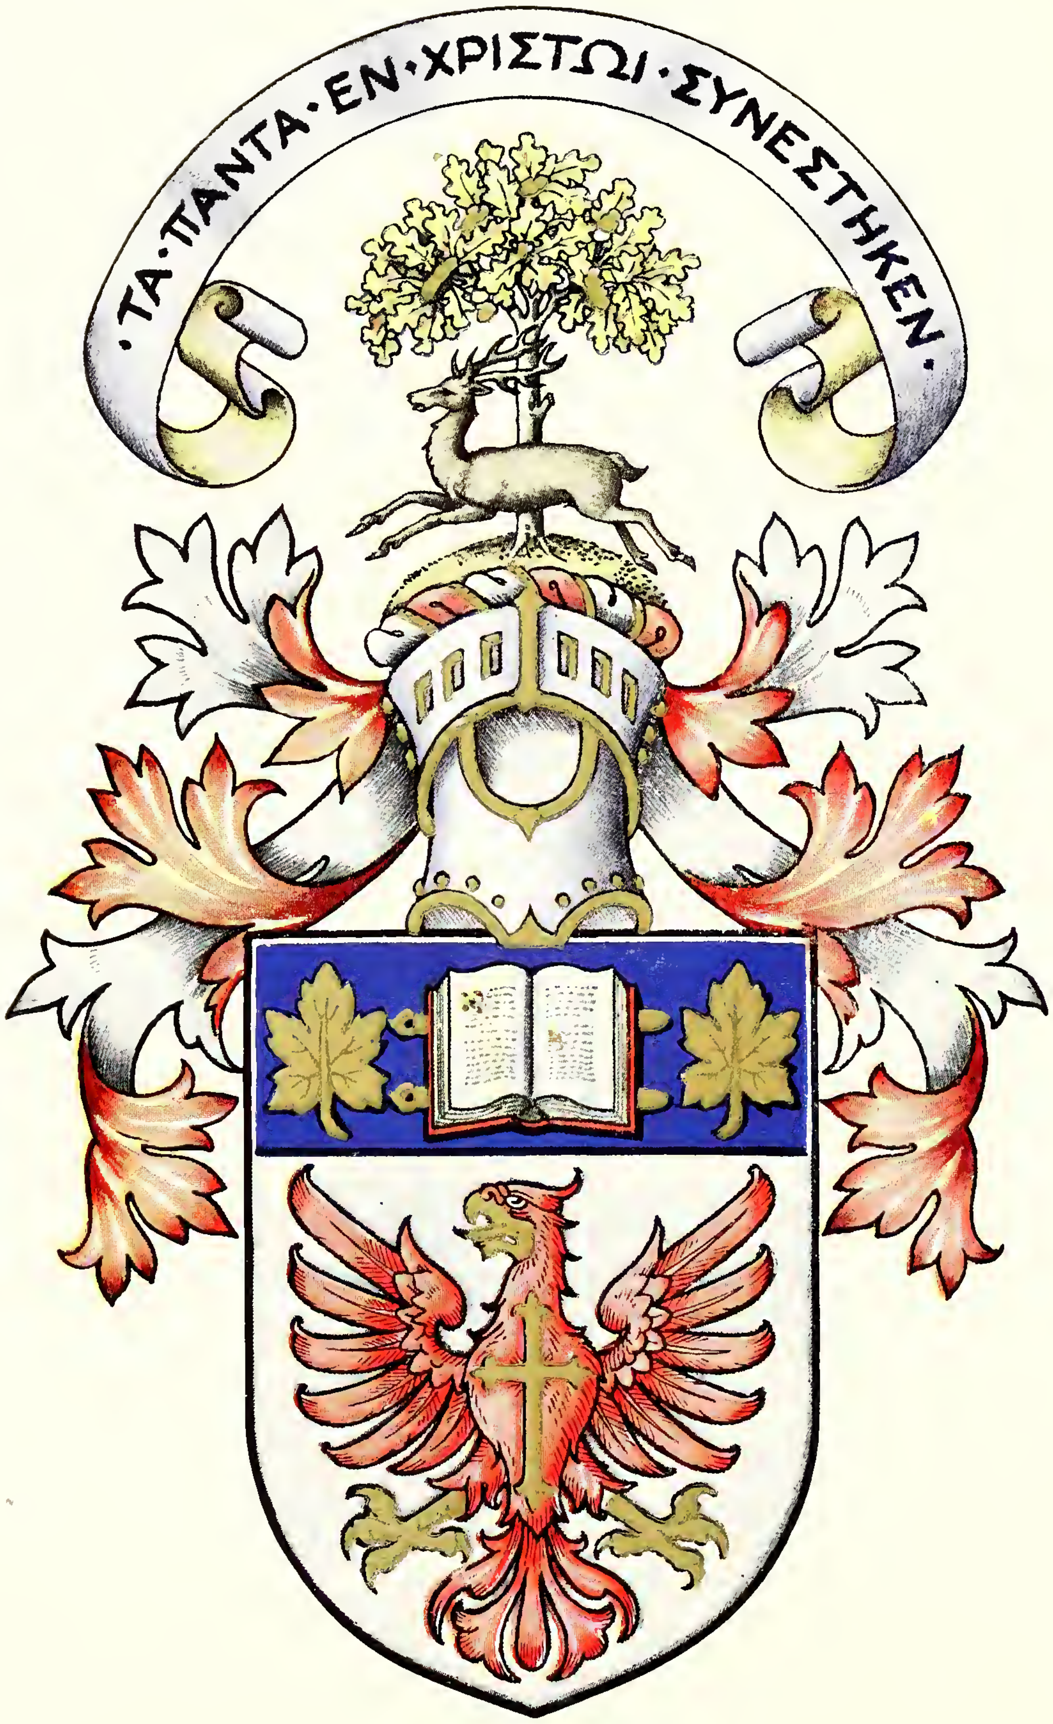
Twenty-Second Volume
Nineteen Hundred and Fifty-Three



·ΤΑ·ΠΑΝΤΑ·ΕΝ·ΧΡΙΣΤΩΙ·ΣΥΝΕΣΤΗΚΕΝ·

Dedication

To the memory of

William Henry Cooper

and to his contributions to the welfare of this University, its students, its faculty, and its friends this volume is gratefully and respectfully dedicated.

Member of the Citizens' Committee at the time of the University's removal to Hamilton in 1930.

Member of the Board of Governors of Hamilton College since its incorporation in January, 1948, and Chairman of the Board from that date until his death on October 20, 1952.

Received Doctor of Laws Degree from McMaster University in May, 1951, in recognition of his sustained and outstanding service to Hamilton in general and to the University in particular.

The President's Message

There is a difference between being able to think and being thoughtful. Thinking is a discipline and a skill, which universities always hope to impart to their members by teaching them to seek out full evidence and evaluate it. But being thoughtful is a frame of mind, a mature habit, a governing attitude; and universities are always fearful that they have not managed to produce it in their members. In a way, it is a moral attitude, as our common use of the word indicates, when we take thoughtfulness to refer to consideration for other people, appreciating their needs and their rights. But to be thoughtful is essentially to have an inner drive to consider all things in their relationships, and to know one's own deep needs and ultimate end. It is not the belligerent impatience of the clever undergraduate who, when he has discovered an idea, thinks he invented it, or who, sensing the difficulties that accompany any great conviction, decides that convictions are to be deflated rather than affirmed. It is, instead, the sober insistence of the mind that it will not be satisfied until it has thought its way through to a conclusion, or at least to a sense of understanding, of sympathy and of sustained curiosity where conclusions may not yet be possible. Convictions and conclusions are a combination of a knowledge of evidence and a sense of relationships and values.

The almost universal impatience men feel about education is traceable to many causes. Instructors, students and the public are all disturbed about the methods, the content and the products of education. For that matter, they always have been and always will be, because knowledge is so vast, life so complicated, and people always in a hurry to achieve security and certainty, with the emphasis at present most noticeably on security of an economic and political type. But inner security is still the great requisite, and should be the most valuable end product of higher education. It is not guaranteed by graduation, and it is not secured by passing examinations on that small portion of learning that is examinable and tolerant of exact grading.

My continued hope is that McMaster graduates have learned to read and learned to think, and that they will continue to read and to think, not in professional fields only but in the field where ultimate terms of reference demand the exercise of religious faith and of thoughtfulness for others.

G. P. GILMOUR.

Men and Women of McMaster

CONGRATULATIONS on the successful completion of your university studies.

Now your years of training are over. You are on the threshold of the career in life you have been working and waiting for. Canada has been waiting for you, too. Nowhere in the whole world is the door of opportunity open wider to trained, aggressive, ambitious young men and women than here in your own Canada. For every eager mind that steps forth this spring from McMaster, and Canada's other fine universities, there's a challenging job waiting somewhere in this broad land.

All the best to you, then. We have confidence that in your years you will help carry Canada's eminence to new peaks; and we hope that on the way up, your life will be filled with the rewards you want.

Serving
HAMILTON & DISTRICT

For more than 100 years the Spectator has been serving the people of Hamilton and the Niagara Peninsula, bringing them the news of the world and of their next door neighbours. Daily it reports the glories and the tragedies, the unusual and the humdrum that make up our daily life. Through its columns walk the great, the near great and the not so great; the champion and the boys who play ball on the corner sandlot.

In its advertisements are mirrored the wants and the needs of the nation, the community and the individual. Changing fashions, changing prices, personal notices, births, deaths and marriages all have their place.

It is a fine newspaper serving a great community.

this oven cooks a 275-ton batch

The baker's oven feeds a nation's stomachs. But here is an oven that feeds its vital industries with steel. From this oven or Open Hearth Furnace, as the steel men call it, pours the steel which eventually is rolled or drawn into sheets, plates, bars, rods and wire . . . needed in one form or another in every Canadian home . . . on every farm . . . in every industry . . . in peace or war.

To-day, Canada needs more and more steel for greater and still greater industrial production. Stelco has recently invested more than $60,000,000 to expand its steel-making facilities. This expansion includes the building of four giant new Open Hearth Furnaces. Out of them is pouring 650,000 additional tons of steel per year for industrial progress . . . for better living . . . for a stronger Canada.

Certified Public Accountant

Possession of the recognized degree, Certified Public Accountant, opens many doors to college graduates. Executive and administrative positions in industry and in the public service, as well as in public practice, are available to those holding the degree.

The Certified Public Accountants Association of Ontario, incorporated in 1926, offers courses leading to the degree, which are conducted by the University of Toronto Extension Department.

Holders of Bachelor of Arts degrees may, upon application, obtain exemption from the first year of the Course and the Primary Examination.

Practical experience may be obtained in public accounting or in business.
